If there ever was a time and place when politics ought to be forgotten and the effort to gain partisan advantage ought to be laid aside, the time is now and the place is the capitol of the United States. There are just two big jobs before this congress. One is to frame a new tax law that will distribute as equitably as possible the burden of the additional dollars of revenue which must be raised in order to balance the national budget, and the other is to reduce federal expenses to as great an extent as can be done without adding unnecessarily to unemployment or restricting any useful and necessary governmental activity. To reach these two vital objectives is so obviously essential to the public welfare that it would seem as if even the rankest of politicians would rise to the plane of statesmanship until the task is finished.

But what is the present situation?

The Democratic house of representatives first took up the problem of taxation. The treasury department had submitted to the house a tax bill which was thoroughly well balanced, consistent and logical. But just about that time Democratic leaders apparently began to fear that President Hoover and his administration were likely to gain too much credit for political leadership, seeing that the only constructive measure looking to business recovery had come from the White House, and so they determined to strike out upon an independent course. The ways and means committee substituted a manufacturers' sales tax for many of the paragraphs of the treasury department measure and presented the bill to the house in that form. The administration did not altogether like the new bill but in the hope of getting prompt action it offered no objections to it and Republican leaders in the house joined with the Democratic leadership in giving it their support. But the Democratic leaders made the tactical blunder of submitting this highly controversial bill to the house without any restrictions upon the debate or amendment, and the result was that they lost all control over their membership. Party discipline broke down utterly and the sales feature of the tax bill was stricken out. This left a big hole in the measure and the house filled it up with a shovel, tossing in one tax item after another without regard to rhyme or reason. This hodgepodge measure has been in the hands of the senate committee for the past three or four weeks and it certainly is to be hoped that it will be reduced to some sort of orderliness by the time it reaches the senate.

But while the house was making ducks and drakes of the new tax bill, the senate, struggling with the economy problem, was playing an equally sorry role. The President, weeks ago, submitted to the congress, through the economy committee of the house, a proposal to stagger employment in the government service, as is so generally being done in industry, and require annual employees to take a 30 days' leave without pay. This plan would effect an annual saving of about 80 million dollars and would in-

SUPT. BACHRODT
ADDRESSES LOCAL GRANGERS TUES.

Walter L. Bachrodt, superintendent of San Jose schools, was the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Orchard City Grange last Tuesday evening at the I. O. O. F. hall.

Mrs. H. C. Hagen introduced the speaker, who spoke very interestingly on conditions influencing the schools of California.

No action was taken when a communication from the state Grange lecturer was read, asking for contributions to augment the state master's salary.

A brief, open discussion of the Sharkey bill was held.

There were no dismissals from the public service. Indeed it probably would make room for some 20,000 additional part time workers by way of substitutes. Instead of acting on this plan the house committee insisted on a flat 11 per cent reduction in wages, and the senate, under Democratic urge, as fast as appropriation bills reached it, made a horizontal ten per cent cut in all appropriations — about as slovenly and unscientific a procedure as could well be imagined. The postmaster general declares that in his department alone, if the senate measure prevails, from 30,000 to 40,000 postal employees will have to be discharged and the postal service must be drastically curtailed. It seems incredible that men experienced in legislation should blunder so egregiously, and one must hope that a better balanced measure ultimately will prevail.

The country demands and expects rigid economy in federal appropriations this year. But it expects this economy to be practiced in such a way as to produce the least unemployment and the slightest possible interruption in essential government services. The greatest saving could be made through reorganization of the government on lines of greater efficiency. This was what President Hoover recommended long ago, and he offered to be the "goat," and take the entire responsibility of such reorganization upon himself, subject to veto by congress. The house leaders at first rejected this suggestion with an emphatic intimation that they did not propose to make a dictator of the President. But the house economy committee, after studying over the plans, has come back to the President's idea and has written into its omnibus retrenchment bill a proviso that the President shall be authorized to proceed with reorganization, with power to consolidate, transfer and eliminate overlappings within executive departments, his action to become law after lying before the house for 60 days, in case it is not sooner acted upon by that body. If this measure prevails in the house and senate, the first step ever taken by congress to relieve costly and useless duplication and to strike a blow at the bureaucracy which has grown to such appalling proportions will have been taken.

Roosevelt's First Rebuff in Primaries—Senate Committee Boosts Income Taxes—House Playing Havoc With Economy Bill.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FOR the first time since he started out on his hunt for instructed delegates Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt met with a rebuff—two of them, in fact. In the Massachusetts primaries he expected to win eight or ten of the 36 delegates chosen for the Democratic Presidential convention, but Al Smith swept the state and added the entire delegation to his little bundle of votes.

More important because more unexpected was the result in Pennsylvania. The New York governor captured the greater part of that state's delegation, perhaps 60 out of 76 votes, but Smith made a much better showing than anyone had anticipated. Incomplete returns indicated he had carried 15 of the 67 counties, and his majority in Philadelphia was impressive.

Altogether, the leaders of the "Stop Roosevelt" movement were considerably heartened by the outcome of these two primaries.

President Hoover was virtually assured of the 109 Republican delegates to the two states. In Pennsylvania the Republican primary was made interesting by the contest between Senator James J. Davis and Gen. Smedley D. Butler. The famous marine was backed by Governor Pinchot and ran as a dry, but Davis, who had been converted to anti-prohibitionism through the influence of William S. Vare, Republican boss of the state, defeated the general by a plurality that approached 400,000. It was thought that this might mean that the Pennsylvania delegation in the Republican convention would fight earnestly for a plank promising resubmission of the Eighteenth amendment. Mrs. Pinchot, the governor's wife, sought the Republican congressional nomination in the Fifteenth district, but was whipped by Congressman Louis T. McFadden, who some months ago attacked the administration's international finance policies and accused President Hoover of "selling out" to Europe.

FIRST rejecting a proposal by Senator Couzens to boost surtaxes to the wartime maximum of 45 per cent, the senate finance committee voted an increase in all income tax rates above the levies written into the new revenue bill by that house.

The committee almost unanimously adopted a schedule presented by Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, the ranking Democrat, calling for a maximum surtax of 45 per cent instead of the 40 per cent figure carried in the house bill.

Normal income rates were boosted to 3 per cent on the first $4,000 income; 6 per cent on the next $4,000, and 9 per cent on the income above $8,000.

The present normal rates are 1½, 3 and 5 per cent. The house voted to increase these rates to 2, 4 and 7 per cent respectively.

By close votes the tariffs on imported oil and coal which the house added to the measure were struck out. The tax on automobiles was approved.

The house passed and sent to the President the tariff bill restoring to congress all power to alter import duties. The house also passed the $326,000,000 navy bill after refusing to cut the amount 10 per cent.

DETERMINED to get the $20,000,000 economy bill before the senate as quickly as possible, Majority Floor Leader Rainey decreed that the house should hold night sessions until the measure was disposed of.

Immediately a bi-partisan insurgent coalition took charge and overrode the Democratic and Republican leadership. First thing it did was to knock out the provision of the rule limiting the number of amendments to the economy measure to forty, and then it started to rip the bill to pieces. Its primary achievement in this line was the adoption of an amendment by Britten of Illinois exempting from the proposed 11 per cent pay reduction all federal employees with salaries up to and including $2,500. As framed by the committee the exemption ran to $1,000. The change took more than $50,000,000 out of the $200,000,000 the bill was supposed to effect in the annual cost of the federal government.

While this was going on the galleries of the house were thronged with federal employees who cheered on the insurgents.

The administration proposal that veterans' compensation be curtailed in the case of single men receiving a $1,500 income or married men with $3,500 income, with $400 exemption for dependents, also was expected to bring a storm of protest on the house floor.

The economy committee suggestion for a consolidation of the army and navy establishments into a single department of national defense, vigorously opposed by the President and his advisers, likewise meets with objections in both Republican and Democratic ranks.

RICHMOND was full of governors and other dignitaries last week and was mighty busy in other respects. The events included the annual conference of state executives, the Washington bicentennial celebration, a celebration in honor of the landing of the first permanent Colonists, a state music festival, dedication of the first monument to James Monroe in the state, and the opening to the public for the full week of 100 colonial homes and gardens.

The governors, thirty in number, after being received by Governor Pollard, helped to dedicate the Monroe statue at Ash Lawn. The chief address was delivered by Claude G. Bowers, eminent Democratic journalist and orator. The executives also took part in all the other ceremonies, besides holding their own four-day meet. On Wednesday they were addressed by President Hoover, who in one of his most important speeches presented the federal government's case to the states and asked for their fuller cooperation in settling national problems. Thursday evening the governors were entertained at dinner in the White House.

REPRESENTATIVE F. H. LA Guardia of New York, leader of the bloc that defeated the sales tax proposition, provided the sensation of the week in the senate banking committee hearings on stock exchange methods. It was an exposure of alleged high pressure publicity methods, including even bribery, to manipulate prices on the New York Stock exchange, and the documents he offered in proof of his charges involved a number of financial writers formerly employed on New York papers. They were employed by brokerage houses, he said, to "ballyhoo" stocks and sent out misleading statements in order to promote stock purchases. In some cases he said extracts from newspaper articles inspired by high-powered publicity methods were included by brokers in letters to customers.

Five pools in which stocks were manipulated, according to La Guardia, were cited by the New Yorker to back up his assertions. He said that high-pressure methods had been utilized in the handling of pools in Indian Motorcycle stock, Savage Arms, Maxwell Motors, Pure Oil, Simms Petroleum, and Superior Oil. In all instances except the Indian Motorcycle stock, the pools operated back in 1924 and 1925.

Mr. La Guardia named A. Newton Plummer as the high-pressure publicity man who had distributed $280,000 among newspaper men. This man, he said, operated under the title of publicity counsel and sometimes under the name of the Institute of Economic Research. Plummer is now under indictment for forging securities.

The committee in executive session decided to make a sweeping inquiry into the whole stock and bond selling as it affects the stock exchange, and this may last all summer. A steering committee of five was named by Chairman Norbeck to plan the investigation and line up witnesses. Senator Couzens of Michigan, one of the "progressives," is perhaps the leading member of this smaller body and will be a most important factor in the inquiry.

Glass, Fletcher and Norbeck himself also are on the steering committee. Walcott of Connecticut, who initiated the inquiry, has been forced into a minor place by Norbeck.

JAPAN opened a great drive in Manchuria to suppress the fast-growing revolt against the government of the puppet state of Manchoukuo, having previously warned the rest of the world to keep hands off. The rebel forces along the eastern lines of the Chinese Eastern railway and in the lower Sun-gari valley were estimated at 20,000, and there were more of them in other regions.

The Japanese government scorned the resolution of the League of Nations committee of nineteen, calling for the immediate evacuation of Shanghai, and then went ahead to arrange its own plan with the cooperation of Sir Miles Lampson, the British minister to China. It was reported in Geneva that this proposal was accepted by Nanking, so the league committee meekly admitted it would have to remake its resolution to conform. The small powers, which had insisted on drastic action against Japan, didn't like this development but could do nothing.

GERMANY is especially grateful to President Hoover for his promotion of the moratorium on reparations and war debts, but there was no way in which this gratitude could be shown directly to the President, so Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett was chosen to be the recipient of an unusual honor—the bestowal of the degree of doctor of political science by the ancient and famous university of Tuebingen.

This high honor was presented to the ambassador in an impressive ceremony in the presence of representatives of the German cabinet and many of south Germany's most distinguished men. In its centuries of existence the University of Tuebingen has dispensed only a few honorary titles. But, as the rector said, because of his "great effort in alleviating economic problems the university concluded that the American ambassador did signal work in singling out some of the causes of the present difficulties," and decided to honor him.

REFERENDUM of the prohibition question under provisions of article five of the Eighteenth amendment was voted by Michigan Republicans in convention at Grand Rapids. The convention also voted indorsement of President Hoover.

The platform was adopted practically unanimously after a riotous session on the floor, preceded by two hours of debate in the committee on resolutions. The committee refused a report on the soldiers' bonus question.

GEORGIA has a new senator, appointed by Gov. Richard B. Russell, Jr., to fill out part of the unexpired term of the late William J. Harris. The man selected is Maj. John S. Cohen, editor of the Atlanta Journal. He will serve until next November. The Harris term does not expire until 1937, and Governor Russell himself will be a candidate for the place in the general election in the fall.

Major Cohen, who has been Democratic national committeeman from Georgia since 1924, is a member of a distinguished southern family. He joined the staff of the Journal in 1930 and was reporter, special Washington correspondent, and editorial writer. He was a correspondent and later an army officer in the Spanish-American war. His father was a Confederate officer.

Since 1917 Major Cohen has been president and editor of the Journal. He is no stranger to political Washington, having been for a time secretary to Hoke Smith, who was secretary of the interior under President Cleveland.

NATIONAL Socialists, under the leadership of Adolf Hitler scored a great victory in the Prussian elections, and won enough places in other parts of Germany to make them the strongest political party in four of the five states in the reich. But they still lack a clear majority to control any of them. In Bavaria they fell slightly behind.

In Prussia, where the fight was most bitter because of the theory that "whoever controls Prussia controls the reich," the Hitlerite forces garnered 162 seats against the nine they held heretofore. The coalition which makes up the present government also obtained 162 seats. The Communists also gained.

It was announced that the Prussian government would resign on May 24 when the newly elected diet convenes, but will carry on until a new premier of the state is elected. Hitler is insisting that the Nazis should be given control, but there can be no definite decision as to the alignment of the parties until the middle of May, when the Catholic Centrists meet in Berlin for a caucus.

In the Austrian elections also the National Socialists scored heavy and widespread gains, but the control of the government remains in the hands of the Socialists and Christian Socialists. The Pan-German and Agrarian parties were practically wiped out by the Nazis.

PROCLAMATION
TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA:

In recognition of the heroic efforts made by the farmers of our state to overcome their common difficulties and to bring a more abundant return to the people, we have found it fit and appropriate to set aside a day which shall annually be observed as "California Farm Products Day."

The first of these anniversaries has been set for Thursday, June 16. We ask that all residents of California, together on that date in their respective communities, participate in a program which shall have for its purpose the wholesome exploitation of the products of the soil and the opportunity to meet those of our people from whose orchards and farms come the life, the vigor and the rich tradition of our state.

The splendid performance of our farm people under the adverse circumstances which have marked the past few years very directly deserves this recognition and this cooperation on the part of all of California.

The products of our state are known throughout the world. Let us fittingly honor the men and women who have won this recognition at no small sacrifice to themselves.

Even Primitive Peoples Had Reckoning Systems

There have been systems of reckoning time found among the records left by the most primitive peoples. Well regulated systems existed in the Egyptian, Babylonian, Syrian and many other early nations. The Roman and Greek calendars were taken from the Egyptian, Babylonian, Phoenician. The Julian calendar was derived from these and from the ancient Roman calendar and was proclaimed about B. C. 46. Pope Gregory in 1585 A. D. authorized the revision of the Julian calendar, which was adopted by the Roman Catholic countries, but not by Great Britain or America until 1752. By this time there was a variance between the calendars of those nations and those adopting the Gregorian calendar at the earlier date, necessitating an adjustment of 11 days. The Gregorian calendar has now been adopted by practically all the Christian nations and for business purposes by such nations as Japan and China.

THE FARMERS CORNER
By Ralph H. Taylor

California's status in the agricultural world, during the present period of economic distress, has changed radically and fundamentally—perhaps more so than that of any other farming state in the nation.

The changing order is of tremendous significance to the state's farming industry in many respects, but of outstanding importance is the fact that its so-called "luxury crops" are no longer luxuries, but every-day necessities.

California's greatest fame, in the past, has been as a producer of farm luxuries—choice fruits and vegetables and, generally speaking, tastier products for wealthier appetites.

An enviable position it was also considered a dangerous one, especially when "bad times" brought tightened purse strings and the elimination of luxurious living. According to all ordinary rules, California farmers should have been harder hit than the producers of generally recognized staple foods, but actually California agriculture, today, is in better shape than agriculture in any other section of the country.

Two factors in the main, have contributed to the state's ability to salvage the most out of a bad situation—first, public acceptance of California's better foods as staple foods, and, second, the greater efficiency of California farm co-operatives in marketing their products.

Singling out this transition of the state's fruit and vegetable industry from the luxury category to that of daily necessities, the agricultural department of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce reports as follows:

"Current data show that prices for fruit and vegetable specialties, which represent a large part of the California production, have not fallen in proportion with the general farm products price level.

"It is generally considered that in such times as these, the American consumer confines purchases largely to staple food articles, but consumer tendencies during the present depression seem to indicate that fresh fruits and vegetables have become an integral part of the American diet."

Nor is this condition applicable alone to American consumers. During a period when practically all other farm exports have decreased, exports of fruits and vegetables to European markets have continued upward.

Good news for the agricultural industry as a whole comes from the United States bureau of agricultural economics which reports that for the first time in five months the index of the general level of farm prices has advanced over the preceding month.

On March 15 the index of farm prices, as reported by the bureau, was up one point Impossible to Acquire Real Ability to Spell?

It was a ruthless spelling bee that the Catholic Actors' guild held. According to all reports, the spellers who remained in the lineup towards the finish had to submit to heckling by the members already downed, and the announcer was severe with all attempts to get a word repeated. In the old-fashioned spelling bee it used to be all right to ask teacher to repeat while the speller thought furiously in the minute gained.

The rule in this one was elimination of the person making the error. In school you went to the foot of the class and tried to work your way back to the top, but it was a hopeless game for a naturally poor speller. At the end of the session there was a gloomy little group down at the foot, always composed of the same sad individuals.

How the good spellers manage it is a mystery to those who cannot. They can tackle and conquer a word of which they probably never heard through some special faculty—probably just a sense of spell.—New York Times.

New York Cold Spot

The coldest spot in the eastern part of this country is thought to be Owl's Head, in Franklin county, New York. Temperatures of 30 to 40 degrees below zero are not unusual there. A few winters ago the hardy souls who inhabit the hamlet claimed 60 below. Verification was impossible, for the mercury in all local thermometers went down and out at about 50 below. Owl's Head lies 1,530 feet above sea level on the northern tip of the Adirondack plateau. From this point to Malone the railroad drops 800 feet in less than ten miles. Winds coming direct from the North pole first strike land at Owl's Head. Franklin county was once described in a speech in the legislature as "the Siberia of New York," and Owl's Head is its chilliest spot. A native, questioned about the climate, once said: "We have two seasons here, July and winter."—Washington Star.

above the preceding month. The farm price of meat animals advanced four points during the month, reaching 69 per cent of pre-war prices. Fruits and vegetables were up five points, cotton and cotton seed three points, while slight advances were made in prices of wheat, barley and rye.

There is some indication, also, of a slight improvement in general business conditions which, if it continues, will be reflected in upward prices and greater demand for farm products.

Bear Family Widespread Throughout the World

From Polar regions where the huge white bear is the ruler of the snowy wastes, to the tropics where the little cinnamon bear haunts the jungle, or to the Antipodes where much smaller plantigrades are styled bears, every part of the world has, or appears to have had, some member of the bear family among its aboriginal inhabitants.

Despite the evidence of Scripture skeptical critics for years derided the idea of bears existing in Syria or the Holy Land. Ignorance of ordinary historical facts was part of the equipment of these doubters. They knew nothing of, nor studied the accounts of the life history of the good knight Godfrey of Bouillon, who with his brothers Eustace and Baldwin led an army of forty thousand German soldiers to join the crusade to deliver Jerusalem from the Saracens towards the end of the Eleventh century, and who during the long siege of Antioch in Syria went alone to the defense of a poor woodcutter against a fiercely attacking bear, in which encounter he was badly mauled, although he did come out of the conflict victoriously at the last. Certainly Godfrey de Bouillon would bear witness to the fact that there was nothing incongruous in the story David told of having killed a bear in protecting his father's sheep at Bethlehem (Samuel 17:34-36).

That Word "Celt"

Apocryph of a controversy on the pronunciation of the word Celt, a correspondent writes to the London Daily Telegraph: "None of your correspondents has pointed out that the Celts who were originally a race spread over western Europe, were known to the Greeks as Keltai. The Latins called them Celte. But there being no 'k' in the Latin alphabet, the 'c' had nevertheless the pronunciation of that letter. Most people will, I expect, continue to speak of Celts. I might add that 'c' is a superfluous letter in the English alphabet, having no sound of its own, but borrowing its sound from 'k' or 's' as the case may be. It might as a letter be dropped out altogether without much loss."

Moos' Egg Found

A moos' egg has been presented to the Alexander museum in Wanganui, New Zealand. This rare find was made by a party of men who were working on a cliff-face of shellrock on Tokomaru West road. A hollow in the rock was uncovered by blasting operations and lying in it was the egg. Unfortunately a workman broke it with his shovel, but an expert skillfully repaired the smashed portions, and the breaks are not noticeable. It is stated that there are not more than ten moos' eggs in existence. The moos was a dinosaur-like bird having enormous legs and three toes. Its wings were obsolete. Some were 10 to 12 feet high.

Care of Goldfish Pets
Goldfish should never be subjected to extreme changes in water temperature, and it is, therefore, advisable to let the water stand in the room before putting the fish in the aquarium, so as to take away the chill of the freshly drawn water. For this same reason it is a good plan to remove and replace only part of the water at a time. Unless the aquarium is overcrowded with fish it is not necessary to change the water often.

Historic Mount Vernon
Noted for Hospitality
In a day when every true son of the Old Dominion prided himself on being a genial guest and a generous host, General Washington of Mount Vernon was famed for his hospitality, not only in Virginia but throughout the length and breadth of the Atlantic seaboard. Morris from Philadelphia and New York met Adames from Boston, Carrolls from Carrollton and Byrds and Carters from the James at his table, and often a visiting Frenchman or two.
Humble visitors, too, were always assured a welcome at Mount Vernon. The rule was that none was allowed to go away hungry. Washington himself once described his home as "a well resorted tavern," and in a letter from Mount Vernon after his second term as President he wrote: "Mrs. Washington and myself will do what I believe has not been done within the last 20 years by us—that is, sit down to dinner by ourselves."

Crafts of England
Of all the souvenirs which tourists love to bring back with them objects of national or local craftsmanship hold a first place. In England many old crafts still survive in the country places, but they must be searched out. Famous old Buckingham lace can be yet obtained near Beaconsfield from bobbins ages old, real old turned wooden bowls in cherry, yew or elm from Chesham, pottery and beautiful pewter, copper and brass ware at Suffolk Walden in Essex and at Newport in the same county, the Distaff Cottage industry, old furniture and at Widdington, rush matting, the earliest form of carpet, made from the sweet-scented rushes of that green and beautiful land.

Fine Ships in Days of American Naval Glory
American history often speaks of Joshua Humphreys as the designer and builder of the Constitution, the Constellation, the Congress, the President and the United States, which were the greatest ships of their day. The United States was built at his own private yard in Philadelphia. The others were built from his designs and under his supervision in the different yards he was commissioned by congress to choose for such work.

To show what Joshua Humphreys himself thought, there is still a letter in existence addressed to Josiah Barker, naval constructor at the Charlestown navy yard, Boston, Mass., thanking him for a cane made from some timber taken from the Constitution when first repaired at Boston. He says, in thanking Barker: "This cane is of double value to me on account of it having been taken from one of the frigates I constructed in the year 1794, forty-two years ago, under the administration of the ever memorable Washington and General Knox, then his secretary of war. The five frigates, the United States, the President, the Constellation, the Constitution and the Congress were all built by drafts and moulds sent on by me to the different posts where they were to be built." It was the famous Nelson who remarked of these ships, at a later time, "There is in these transatlantic ships a nucleus of trouble for the navy of Great Britain."

Sleep Center in Brain?
A sleep center in the brain is postulated by the Austrian neurologist, C. von Economo, in the American Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases.

While this center is not exactly located, he says, those diseases which show disturbance of the sleep function, such as the abnormally prolonged slumber of encephalitis, show lesions in the neighborhood of the third ventricle of the brain. Cats have been made to yawn and assume positions of rest when this region is stimulated with electricity.

Von Economo believes that the nerve cells of this region are particularly susceptible to some fatiguing substance which circulates in the blood and that once stimulated they inhibit the action of the higher nervous centers. Thus it is able to act as a sentry for the rest of the brain.

Don't Overfeed Goldfish
Overfeeding is the commonest cause of death among goldfish. Feed them only every other day, and just what they will eat. At the start you will not know just how much to feed them for a meal. Therefore, remove the leftover food and feed less next time. You will soon learn by experience how much they should have each time. Too much feeding can be detected by the sluggish movements of the fish and a tendency for them to stay continually at the bottom of the aquarium.

* MORE THAN 210,000 CALIFORNIA WOMEN SAY....

Electric Cooking is Economical...Modern...Clean

"I can't get away!"
"My dear... I wish we'd known about electric ranges before"

SHE never had time to go any place. Repeatedly she made excuses that really meant, "I can't go because dinner isn't ready."

Now she has a modern electric range. Her husband urged her to buy it. It seemed like the right kind of cooking apparatus to him. It was quiet, cool and run by a clock that set heating units to work at their job of cooking food. Thermometers turned of the radiant electric coils that did the cooking. It didn't require someone to stand-by as stove watchman.

Are they satisfied? Are the 210,000 California women grateful to the freedom electric ranges are granting them? Of course they are.

dom electric ranges are granting them? Of course they are.

The modern electric ranges roast meat, steam vegetables, bake cakes and pastry to a noticeably better and more healthful tastiness. And the answer is in the even radiant heat that electricity alone can give.

Electric ranges too, are economical in operation. A considerable amount of the cooking can be done on stored heat in thickly insulated ovens, after the current has turned off. That is why examination of 1,117 electric range users' accounts show the average cost of cooking with electricity is but 1 cent a meal per person.
